CLINCHER FOR THE FESTIVE M. C. ools of His Guilt in the Seduction, Disgrace and Death of a Louisians Girl—Putting Her Out of the Way—How Ho Worked up His Affidavits, E.c., Etc.

NEW ORLEANS, December 27 .- The following has been published here: To the Editor of the Democrat—I hand you herewith for publication a synopsis of the evidence taken before the Acklin committee of which I was a member. This synopsis was written at the time for publication, but for the reason I have heretofore stated, and which I then acquiesced in, it was withheld. I have no desire to pursue Mr. Acklin, but his action in seeking a vindication at the hands of others has reopened the issue of fact, of which the truth can only be determined by submitting the testimony to the public. If the decision of our committee is not based on sufficient testimony, then Mr. Acklin is blication a synopsis of the evidence taken submitting the testimony to the public. If the decision of our committee is not based on sufficient testimony, then Mr. Acklin is entitled to the benefit of it. If, on the other hand, it is justified, let the imputation rest where it belongs. Respectfully, D. B. Penn.

Here follows the statement made by the committee, showing the decision adverse to Acklin's innocence. They notified Mr. Acklin that the decision would be made public. Acklin entreated us not to make this decision public until after 12 m. Sanday, the 13th inst., in order to determine, as he said, after more calm reflection, he then would withdraw from the canvass or not. To this delay we consented for the purpose he had indicated. Pending this delay, Acklin secured a favorable opinion from the second committee, composed of prominent republicans, headed by ex-Governor Hahn, and late Saturday night sent this second and favorable opinion to the city press for publication in the Sunday papers. This extraordinary conduct of Mr. Acklin's, coupled with the fact that the second decision was directly opposite to the one we had rendered, though professedly based on the same evidence, compels us to give a brief synopsis of the evidence on which we gave our decision, which was not dictated by prejective our decision and provide a provide a favorable opinion to the city press for public to the preservation of this city was arrested to-day, charged with commit ning Holiday nd Handkerel EN RAILBOAD

Our city is again to be fortunate. The distinguished gentleman whose name heads this article has determined to become a citizen of Atlanta, and will take up his residence anong us early in the coming new year. We need no higher evidence of the steadily growing importance of the gatecity than the fact that it is constantly being selected as a permanent home by many of the most influential and substantial citizens of this and other states.

Judge Montgomery is just now in the prime of a vigorous manhood, and is among the most honored citizens of Georgia. Having and marked by a high order of professional learning.

The judge is attracted to our city by reason of its salubrious climate, which agrees well with him and his most estimable wife, and also by the rapid growth of Atlanta and the great facilities for reaching all parts of the state, for the judge does more of a general than a local practice. We learn that he will at once improve a lot that he owns in the city, or buy a lot already improved; he has not decided which. The coming of Judge Montgomery to Atlanta will be advantageous to this community in more ways than one, for while he is a fine lawyer, he is also a most excellent gentleman of exemplary Christian life, and a man of means. Thus our society will be the gainer by the introduction into it of Judge Montgomery and his intelligent and accomplished lady, and our business prosperity and well-being enhanced by his means and his influence. We bid them a cordial welcome to the gate city and a happy new year. city and a happy new year.

The new year will disclose another and very different England. The mothercountry is full of suffering-suffering that is steadily on the increase, and that has already reached dimensions beyond the capacity of her charitable institutions. The starving poor cannot all be cared for even now in the great manufacturing districts. Furnaces, and mills. and collieries are all involved. The proprietors are bankrupt, and the workmen starving-literally starving. This is no overdrawn picture. It is the actual situation. The attempt, made necessary by the times, of reductions in wages has led to a large strike at Oldham, where ten thousand spinners are earning nothing. This means that ten thousand familie will soon be on the verge of starvation. In all Lancashire forty cotton mills out of one hundred and fifty are closed and the rest are not active. The iron trade is in no better condition; and upon these two great leading interests of the country the collieries chiefly depend. So that the three great sources of employment are in a state of at least partial paralysis. So great and universal was the distress, it is stated that even the Christmas trade was reduced to dimensions without precedent in Merrie England. The condition of

—On the 2d of December the immense corridor in the palace of justice, Paris, known as the "salon of the lost footsteps," was pronounced fully restored. It now displays all the beauties of the Doric architecture and decoration originally conceived by Jacques Desbrosses. In consequence of the extreme length, breadth and height of the salon the footsteps of a person at one end cannot be heard at the other. Hence the name.

—When the French petroleum ship Melanie blew up at Bayonne, two sailors of the British bark Annabella Clark went in a small boat to the rescue of the crew, and stood by the burning ship until the last man had left her, although their own clothes were on fire. One of them, James McIntosh, of Androssan, held on the burning riggin until his left hand was almost consumed, rather than let go and abandom a brother seaman to his fate. It is suggested that this act of splendid heroism is worthy of the Victoria cross.

—Some time ago the emperor of Russia granted a charter to the university of women, and the Russian minister of war has now officially taken up the subject of training lady doctors for army practice. This measure has been decided upon in consequence of the proof given in the late war of the utter inability of the regular medical staff to cope with the enormous number of sick and wounded. Classes for the ininstruction of female medical students, to eventually become members of the army medical staff, will soon be formed at St. Petersburg.

Taking the number of bestles to the kilogramme at 720, we have the astonishing number of 13,000,000 of these enemies of the farmer put out of the way at once.

wentured on the broad question as to the condition of the south. "The south," said he, "is poor, not on the verge of bankruptcy, but clear down in the abyss of poverty; not one decade, but two, it will take to restore the south to her pristing glory and position. The war left us in a horrible condition, but by perseverance, economy, education and the restoration of local concentrative results in time fully reconomy, education and the restoration of local government, we will in time fully recuperate." "Who is the south in favor of for president in 1880 on the democratic ticket; and if the republicans are to have another executive who would the south prefer?" "Well, I will answer your last question first. If, by the decrees of Ormipotence, we are not to be free for four years more from radical power, then I should say give us a full lion, not a sucking sheep. Grant is a lion. I have respect for the man, because he kills or wins. I have never forgotten how gracefully he treated Lee and our soldiers at Appomattox. No, Grant is better, a lion though he is, for the south than is a sheep who strives to make a bear of himself." "If don't understand your figures, general." "Oh, well, then, I will not explain further." "But you have not answered my first question." "No, sir; I must beg not to do so, for there are so many admired to the south the control of the contr swered my first question." "No, sir; I must beg not to do so, for there are so many admi beg not to do so, for there are so many admirable gentlemen, both in the north and in the south, that are so eminently calculated to become the democratic standard-bearer that I must forbear to speak of them by name." "What do you think of Thurman, general?" "I think Judge Thurman is a great not speak of wonderful indicial capacity, a gentleman of fine manners, of polished education and a statesman of ex-traordinary character and foresight."

"Who is the choice of Georgia, general, for the nomination?"
"Georgia wants the man who can win— "The strenger man in the whole field—a man the strongest man in the whole field—a man who can wield enough strength to demolish at one stroke the whole system of rotten re at one stroke the whole system of rotten republicanism. But will you excuse me, as I see my friend, Representative Hooker, and I desire to see him?" and so the old, but still vigilant and invincible defender of state rights, the ultra leader of the south, the last conspicuous survivor of the decaded Calhoun contederacy, slowly, but majestically, moved away, and was soon lost in the great hall, where he so often pleaded for his principles with an eloquence like unto McDuffie, Prentiss, Choate and Webster.

Now, if this farmer would take his Bible e will find that Isaiah and Moses had something on subjects connected with seed Years ago, the Romans had a goddess to preside over the effect of manure on vegetation. Xenophon recommended ploughing in of green crops in place of dung. The phratus, years and years ago, recommended mixture of soils, he recommended compost, he advised the cutting of long stubble and mixing it with dung. Cato said, "Study to have a large dung hill, keep your com-

Cannot our legislators, like Chatham, believe that the chief element of Georgia's prosperity is to make every exertion to foster this interest, for there is where the strength is? This interest, did we say? Ah! Georgia soil is the truest friend she has. Eighteen hundred years ago Pliny said, "Like a kind mother, the earth receives us at our birth, and sustains us when born;" and Goldsmith wrote, "It is the earth alone of all the elements around us that is never found an enemy to man;" and we add, if Georgia soil was properly looked after, and cared for, it would produce enough to supply he; population, and prove to be as kind a mother as when Pliny wrote.

If cows are not well fed and comfortably sheltered at this season, the farmer will not be troubled with a superabundance of milk. In fact it requires a heap of food to make a heap of milk. If the cow's life is kept up, if she is strong and healthy, it requires food, and it takes food to keep her in this condition; and'fi in addition to this she gives milk, it takes more food to make the milk. Give her good hay and straw, and corn fodder, corn meal, peas, bran, etc., and she on her part will give milk. At this season of the year cows should be kept up at night, and so, too, cold, chilly weather.

At 7 a, m, the thermometer showed nineteen degrees Fahrenheit. Though the mercury did not fall as low as on Christmas, yet the average temperature of the day was the coldest we have had this winter. A more disagreeable day is hard to conceive. Occasional snow, driving winds of cutting chilliness, sleet over nearly all the ground and walking in the open air almost painful. Last night promised nothing better. At midnight it was bitter cold, but quite clear. It is a very remarkable spell of weather for Atlanta, and hence we have spoken so fully of it. Such a continued severe coldness has not been kown here for years. we are enabled to sell Parlor and Bed-roc Suites at least 10 per cent, cheaper than any nouse in Georgia.
